CONFINED SPACE SAFETY

INTRODUCTION

Confined Spaces can be deadly spaces. No one is to enter, attend to, or supervise a confined space until they have been trained in their duties. This tailgate safety meeting is a reminder of the dangers and the importance of following OSHA's confined space safety procedures.

We will discuss three things:

(1) WHAT A CONFINED SPACE IS & WHEN IT IS "PERMIT REQUIRED"

(2) CONFINED SPACE DANGERS

(3) SPACE REMINDERS

WHAT A CONFINED SPACE IS & WHEN IT IS "PERMIT REQUIRED"

OSHA defines a confined space as meeting three criteria:

1. It has limited means of entry and/or exit.
2. It is large enough for a worker to enter into it.
3. It is not intended for regular/continuous occupancy.

A confined space is classified as "Permit Required" if it has one or more of the following characteristics:

- Contains or has the potential to contain a hazardous atmosphere.
- Has material that has the potential to engulf, trap or asphyxiate an entrant.
- Contains any other recognized safety and health hazard (example: live electrical, sewer, etc.)

Question: What are some examples of confined spaces?

(Some examples: Wells, pits, manholes, attics, tanks)
